The Secret Trail'

SCOTLAND YARD GOES OUT AFTER ITS MAN

BY ANTHONY ARMSTRONG

CHAPTER 27
A long, drawn-out discourse, which was to last all night, Jimmie did not have. An encounter on the part of the two, he was sure, was at last. He had too high an opinion of the other's cleverness, and the minutes spent in explanation and particularly the time he had a small balcony, when he crossed the road to a restaurant, opposite and established him in a position which was not good.

It was too quick, however, he saw Zita, and, by a tall, stooping Russian, the man as unlike his own dandies had ever seen. A moment later, however, he was to be unlike a spy who was to be a good spy.

He was complicated, as they ran along the avenue de l'Opera. He had got a line on all three of them now. Tonight he ought to be able to get his hands on the Murchison, and at last. He was highly pleased with himself and for the first time realized that after all the rush and excitement he was tired and hungry.

He finished his drink and was about to leave, when a sudden thought struck him. The spies must be hungry, too, and had surely certainly gone out to a restaurant. Therefore they would be away for an hour at least. Now, for tonight, was his real opportunity.

He could slip back to the hotel, step up the Murchison, sight, and catch the night train for London. There was a doubt that that was his best course.

He saw the three spies a couple more minutes and then stalked across to the hotel. It looked almost too easy; his enemies, believing him under lock and key in England, had shown themselves completely off their guard. How Hulley would have liked to have been in on this final triumph!

It struck him at this point that there was just a chance that the young man had come over by airplane that afternoon to lead him on. In which case he would have gone to the Ritz-Carlton hotel to get in touch. Jimmie paused with his foot on the first stair and turned back to the telephone by the saloon.

No, the clerk at the Ritz-Carlton assured him over the wire, Monsieur Hulley had not been heard of. Was he coming? In that case could one give a message?

But, certainly. If they would be so good as to put a note up for him against his arrival to let him know that a Monsieur Jules had called up from the Hotel Metz. Monsieur Hulley would no doubt be delighted. Good!

Jimmie rang off. In another moment he had obtained, unobserved from the hotel, the key of No. One's room—the number of which he had noted earlier while leaning over the bureau, conversing with the properties—and was speeding upstairs.

Incubus, fool, thought Jimmie, on finding the door was not locked. He made a rapid search of the room, but could not discover the little piece of hair which you arrange your hair with a little Danderine on your brush. Then as you draw the brush through your hair, see how it becomes softer, easier to manage, how its natural color is made out how it takes on new volume and lustre!

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff, stops falling hair, scalp and scalp, healthy, encourages the growth of long, silky, shiny hair. Five million bottles a year. That proves Danderine's success!

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD SHORTIMER LEWIS

ANOTHER week has went, and I hate him," said my grandfather. And then he began to laugh on the inside of himself and my aunt took a whiff of camphor and turned her face to the wall, and I could see my father watching me so I cleaned up my plate and he went to work. My uncle is not back yet. If he don't get back for the first of March he will lose his job and then he can't pay his board. My mother is wishing that if he is coming back he would get back in time.

There was a tub of water under the hydrant at school and I acted the Lost Dog of Troy if he put that crawfish in there, and he bent down with his nose almost touching the water to look for it, and Feeble got him by the ankles and stood him on his head in it. I was only going to duck him. He was not through to his shins, and the teacher sent him home. He didn't tell who done it. He didn't know. He is a lucky stiff.

It wasn't cold or warm when I let Jubilee down, and me and the bunch was talking about it being almost summer and wondering who would see the first snake. When I went in to strum the milk and feed my face I asked my grandfather if he was looking for the first robin, and he said robins had too much sense to show up before Valentine's day. He said the weather man is getting ready to send us a tail twister a rip-snorter and a ball-buster, and he didn't know if it would come on Valentine's day or on the first of March. He said one Valentine's day he was out fishing and got hung to a big fish that pulled so hard that it broke the rod he had and when the people saw him up he was in a solid block of ice. When I asked him how he got out of it my aunt who had come out of her room and crepted and willed on the lounge said that the people that got him out sent him to my grandmother for a valentine, and people that get valentines had to keep them, and that was how come he was able to get married. Then my grandfather said to her, "By zoll, I'll put you in a mailing cylinder and send you to a fellow I know named Pere Sangerer." "I taught you didn't like Mr. Sangerer," said my mother.

At about 10 o'clock Siminski re-entered. He had obviously been celebrating No. 1's success, and so, too, had Zita, who followed. They were laughing together and the Russian's body swayed even more as he whispered something into Zita's ear. No, I himself, however, entering a moment later, looked as cool as ever, and his deep black eyes were just as cold and calculating as when Jimmie had seen him on the platform.

Siminski, whose breath smelled of brandy, had then pulled his pistol, blinking out into the light with a flourish.

"Here you are, Vloff!" he said. "Here's the cat."

To Be Continued

DANDRUFF

A Sure Way to End It!

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then destroy it entirely. To do this, just get four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid soap from any drug store (this is all you will need); apply it at night, when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign in trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and dandruff of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be finely, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. —Ad.

Love's Reawakening The Story of a Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

By ADELE GARRISON

A Heavily Insured Express Package Arrives at Farmhouse for Lillian LILLIAN'S face in its absolute repose was a striking contrast to Katherine's excited one, and there was but of agitation in her eyes as she answered my little maid's message.

"Thank you, Karen," she said. "Will you please tell Mr. Underwood that I will come down at once?"

"Yes, I tell him," Karen answered and sped back downstairs, too.

Lillian sat up in bed, and I saw that she had seized the opportunity to pull herself together. Katherine's eyes blazed brightly at me across our friend's bent head, but I could only shake my own head negatively, for I could not see why the announcement of a boy addressed to Lillian should upset her. Frequently she received envoys of art materials and books.

But like a sudden dash of memory quickened my pulses could it be possible—my eyes traveled away from Katherine's face to Lillian's and at the same instant she raised her head and looked at me.

"Will you come downstairs with me?" she asked, both of us seated the next instant. "I have this box to show you."

"Look here, old dear," Katherine said, "I have an affectionate hand on her shoulder. You know you don't need to do the inclusive courtesy start to do. I don't know what this is all about and I don't want to guess. Besides I have some things I must attend to up here, too. Lastly, I don't know Harry as well as Midge does. So take her with you—and my blessing."

She laughed lightly, pulled Lillian to her feet and gave her a friendly little shove toward the door, nodding to me as she did so. I stepped to Lillian's side but she had turned toward Katherine.

"There may make less more thoughtful than you, Katherina," she said, "but I don't know where. Come on Midge." I may as well face the orchestra now as later."

But when we were out of the room, she said no word of explanation, and of course I made no comment. But when we reached the side hall where Harry Underwood stood beside a big wooden box, I heard a catch of her breath, and knew that she had noted with me a certain hint of disquietude in the big man's manner.

Harry is Pretched.

To one who knew Harry Underwood, there was food for thought in the palpable restraint of his big brawny voice.

"What do you want done with this?" he asked. "It's addressed to you, from the Untaklik."

His eyes were blackness. Intensity, their brilliancy still unblown, were fixed upon her face, so I had not noticed the involuntary start I had made when Katie had brought the message concerning the box. With an instinctive urge upon me to interpose some defense between Lillian and those brilliant, scorching eyes, I gave a faint little exclamation of delight, in as childlike manner as I could manage.

"Oh! Lillian!" I exclaimed. "I know what this is. I've been expecting its arrival every day. It's the ground pine Mrs. Chegong always sends me every year for my Christmas decorations. It's wonderful up there in the mountains near them, and she always dear about gathering it. When they ever manage to get such strands, I don't know, they must take infinite pains and trouble."

"Not quite good enough, old dear!" There was an edge in Harry Underwood's voice, although he was grinning broadly as he turned to me. "The box happens to be addressed to Lillian."

"It is, but, for the time," I retorted quickly, hoping that my intention would hold out, although, indeed, there was truth enough in what I was saying.

POLICE SEEK MAN IN AKRON DOPE MURDER

Woman, Said To Be Undercover Agent, Found Dazed; Later Dies in Hospital

AKRON, Feb. 7—Bounding up members of an alleged narcotics ring operating in northeastern Ohio, police today sought a man named "Jes" as the murderer of Mrs. Ruth Murray, $1, reported undercover agent for federal narcotics investigators. The woman came here recently from Detroit.

Mrs. Murray, who had been missing from her home since Sunday afternoon, was found dazedly stumbling along the Akron, Canton & Youngstown railroad tracks Wednesday. She died yesterday at City Hospital and a post mortem revealed her death was due to a fractured skull resulting apparently from two severe blows over her right ear.

"Jes, Jes did it," she groaned in her semi-conscious condition just before her death, according to police. This was her only clue to the identity of her assailant. Discovery of the fact that Mrs. Murray was reported to have acted as an undercover agent for narcotics investigators led police to the belief that "Jes" may be a narcotics ring chieftain, who was anxious to put the woman out of the way.

Four men, one of whom it is known to police as the city's "dope king," were questioned for several hours yesterday, but were later released.

Detectors investigating the case attempted to reconstruct the events leading up to the woman's murder. They discovered that Mrs. Murray had left the house where she had been staying with a Cleveland son late Sunday afternoon. She started out, it was learned, to go in a telephone booth to receive some money. The woman never applied for the money.

A woman, with whom Mrs. Murray and her son were staying, told authorities that Mrs. Murray once confided to her that she had been sent here to work as a narcotics investigator.

Mrs. Murray's husband is a chef. He was formerly employed in an Akron restaurant, but is now living in Detroit.

YOUNGSTOWN STEEL PLANS HUGE MILL

Authorizes $10,000,000 for Project; Consolidation Reports Persist

YOUNGSTOWN, Feb. 7—Reports of a consolidation of Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., Island of Commerce, and Jones & Laughlin of Pittsburgh, correlated here today following the authorization by directors of the Youngstown concern here yesterday for the expenditure of $10,000,000 to erect a continuous sheet mill.

On the basis of the expansion program it was deemed unlikely that Youngstown Sheet & Tube is to become a member of the new organization. $33,000,000 New Republic Steel Corp.

The proposed continuous sheet mill of the Youngstown company will be built at the Brier Hill works. It will be operated, according to the announcement, under American Rolling Mills' patents, acquired recently by Sheet & Tube, and it is expected to furnish employment for more than 1,000 men.

Construction of the new mill, officials of Sheet & Tube said, will be commenced immediately. Financing of the project, it is expected, will follow in accordance with the company's usual policy of paying for such an expansion through earnings.

European Dancing Champions Are Coming to United States To Compete in Tournaments

BERLIN—Encouraged by spectacular successes at European dancing tournaments Franklin Gerti Hepprich-Macco and Heribert Jenisch, of Vienna, owners of the world championship, heroes won at Nice in 1929, are planning a visit to the United States early this year to compete in American tournaments.

Franklin Gerti is the daughter of Professor H. F. Macco, who devoted years of scientific research to the history of the Hoover family. The history was completed last year and sent to Washington, where it is said to have won the approval of the president.

The Austro-German championship couple can numerous European titles and won a number of first prizes at tournaments held in Vienna, Berlin, Paris, and Nice.

At present the couple appears in a dancing sketch at the Munich "Deutsches Theater," drawing large audiences and rousing the enthusiasm of newspaper critics.

The couple will leave for the United States early this year, after finishing their engagement with the "Deutsches Theatre." Both couple are looking forward to tournaments in America with pleasure and confidence, hoping to win additional prizes and honors.

FARMERS FIGHT TO KEEP RAIL STATION

Win First Round and Point South of City Still Gets Service

The store ceased to be a profitable venture a decade ago, and for the last seven years has been occupied as residence by Will Ham Stenger.

Last year the depot was torn down, and now the Pennsylvania railroad wants to abandon the stop altogether. But no, that would be too much. The residents of the section, upheld by a ruling of the utility commission, have prevented that.

In 1906, officials of the Columbus, Sandusky & Hocking railroad approached George Benzler, who owned and still owns land on either side of the tracks, secured from him the gift of an acre of ground, created a depot and railroad stop and installed Mr. Benzler as agent.

Bought by Pennsylvania.

A few months later, Mr. Benzler resigned, and still later the railroad line was sold to the Pennsylvania Railway Co. However, the project flourished, as farmers sent out car after car of lumber, and farm products, and soon after the line was built, Mr. Benzler erected a general store immediately south of the station. He soon rented this, after operating it a few years.

The building, 200 feet long, was promptly rebuilt, becoming a post office and apparently the foundation of what was to be a prosperous village.

All these plans were for neat, buildings at the depot soon fell off in a few cars a year, and the store was entirely abandoned. All that remained is a siding, a short distance above the store building, and a scale where the hay and grain now shipped may be weighed. Last year 22 cars were handled, including the railroad company ships.

Whether or not the Pennsylvania Railway Co. will continue efforts to have the stop abandoned is problematical. Defeated in its application before the utility commission, the railway company may continue to fight in courts.

Can they imagine a ruler of infinite

Eight Passengers Marooned Several Hours Along Road East of Kenton

Eight bus passengers, one of them a woman, were marooned several hours along the roadside last night when an east bound Chicago-Pittsburgh motor coach of the Greyhound Lines skidded into the ditch four miles east of Kenton shortly before 9 o'clock.

The passengers were picked up by a relief bus at an early hour this morning. No one was injured.

The accident occurred on the steep, winding highway while two buses of the Greyhound Lines were attempting to pass. Both buses, according to the passengers, slowed up and the rear of the east-bound coach skidded into the ditch. Very little damage was done to the bus.

said that he would be able to attend

Tells Officials

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 7—Daniel Flores, youthful Mexican who shot and severely wounded President Porfirio Ruiz a few hours after his inauguration has acknowledged his allegiance to the Communists.

While previously Flores stoutly maintained he had attempted to assassinate the president, for purely personal reasons, it is now reported he was a result of Señor Ortiz Rodríguez's initiative in the capture of diplomatic relations between the United States and Soviet Russia.

Mexican newspapers stress the fact that Charros, state of San Luis Potosí, which is Flores' home town, is a hotbed of communism.

death has been recorded in Ohio from smallpox since the latter part of rapid increase of the disease in the state, health officials averred.

Wilson Beck.

Jury Convicts Him of Beating Girl Who Slammed Her Book

CINCINNATI, Feb. 7—Lloyd Brown, 22, school teacher, was found by a teacher's finesse today after he had been convicted of assault and battery upon Cleo Gast, 14, by a jury yesterday.

William Melvin, county school supervisor, immediately revoked Brown's license upon learning the jury's decision.

Sentence has been deferred by the judge sitting on the case.

The whole affair came as the result of the fast girl closing a school book too hard in class.

ESSENTIAL IN ANY DIET

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Is Effective Relief for Constipation. Also Adds Iron to the Blood

Do you suffer from constipation? Are you one of those who have tried one "vest pocket cure" after another, and still have no sense of permanent relief? If so, this is big news to you! Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is natural, effective relief for both temporary and recurring constipation. It is the original—and today is included in the diets of millions of people who formerly suffered from constipation.

When roughage is missing from food, constipation is the consequence. The soft foods we eat today seldom include enough roughage. The simple necessity, then, is to see to it that sufficient roughage is included in our food.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the bulk that your system requires.

In addition, it is rich in iron. Scientific research proves that nearly all this iron is absorbed by the system, building red blood and bringing the glorious color of health to the complexion.

Former Exalted Rulers Conduct Annual Meeting; Social Session Held

Annual observance of past exalted rulers' night was held by Marion Lodge of Elks at its weekly meeting in the Lodge building on South State St. last night. Formal nominations for the annual election of officers also took place. The election will be held at the first meeting night in March.

All official posts of the Lodge were filled by former exalted rulers and short talks were given by them. An informal social session followed the meeting, the main feature being a turkey soup supper served by William Melly.

Past exalted rulers filling the offices last night were: A. F. Mac-Scott, exalted ruler; Harry S. Elliott, esteemed leading knight; George T. Goran, esteemed loyal knight; Jay Vaughan, esteemed lecturing knight; S. G. Kleinmuntz, secretary; L. Don Jones, esquire, and James Wack, chaplain.

It was announced that there will be invitation at next week's meeting.

Our Export Trade and Europe.

The exports of the United States in 1929, amounting in round figures to $2,245,000,000, were 2.5 per cent. higher than in 1928, nearly two and a half times higher than the yearly average value for the period from 1910 to 1914 and exceeded those of any year in our history save the war year of 1916 and the post-war year of 1920. Our imports for 1929 were $4,400,000,000, an increase of $309,000,000 over 1928 and only slightly below the high imports year of 1926. These figures were given out for publication this week by the department of commerce in Washington.

While we were making this remarkable showing, French exports showed a decline of $32,000,000, and this difference in results of the year's trade is probably what has stirred the French to renewed activity for a concerted European movement looking to opposition to the growing business of the United States in Europe.

During last year France imported $3,254, 621,000 francs—about $2,331,554,900—worth of raw materials, manufactured products and food while she sold to the outside world $6,672,348,000 francs—about $2,002,833,920—a difference of nearly $2,000,000,000 francs—about $20,000,000.

The totals for 1928 were: Imports $3,155,552,000 francs; exports, $1,574,729, 000 francs. It will be seen that 1929 showed an increase of 4,849,072,000 francs—about $193,062,800—in imports.

Despite this unfavorable record balance, France had a very good year, the visible unfavorable balance being wiped out by invisible items, such as tourist trade, estimated to have amounted to over $200,000,000, and a new high level of business activity and production was achieved, with the state finances in excellent shape and a treasury surplus permitting a material reduction in this year's tax bills.

The feature of the year in France is reported to have been the increased activity in the home market, an increase which taxed the productive capacity of French industry. This accounted for the drop in exports and the corresponding increase in imports, a considerable proportion of the latter being industrial materials brought in for expansion purposes. This prosperity has encouraged industry to go in extensively for consolidations and labor-saving methods and machinery and to improve generally the efficiency of the industrial system.

In the face of this showing for the year, by all odds the best post-war year France has enjoyed, Aristide Briand has in no way lessened his labors to bring about the "United States of Europe" envisaged by the late Dr. Gustav Stresemann, and Berlin advises are to the effect that many believe such a confederation is already in the making. In other words, Europe is unwilling to have us continue to enjoy the prosperity which has been ours as a result of our trading with her and plans to combine to reap a part of it, if not as a government of states, then as a league of states working as one for an economic advantage.

A Saving, but No Fleet Parity.

If London advises are to be credited, and they come in the same tenor from so many American news writers that they can hardly be questioned, the American delegation to the five-power naval conference has practically agreed to accept the British plan to cut battleship strength.

The British plan provides for the extension for five years, or until the end of 1932, of the ten-year battleship building holiday agreed upon at the Washington naval conference in 1922, and the reduction of the British battleship fleet by five units, the United States by three and the Japanese by one.

This would leave fifteen battleships, each to Great Britain and the United States and nine in Japan, and work an annual maintenance and operation rating of approximately $17,- 500,000 to Great Britain, saving of $10,000,000 to the United States and $3,500,- 000 to Japan, as it is figured that it costs $2,500,000 yearly to maintain a battleship and keep it in commission. Thus the saving for the five-year extension period would be approximately $47,500,000 for Great Britain, $31,500,000 for the United States, and $16,- 500,000 for Japan, a total saving for the three countries of $119,500,000 for the five-year period. Added to this, of course, would be an immense saving on construction, for in the general order of things there would naturally be battleship building by the three powers were the building holiday to end next year, as provided at the Washington conference.

So much for the economic side of the proposition, but there's the other side—that of parity in battleship strength between this country and Great Britain. Under the plan, neither the United States nor Great Britain would junk their newer ships. The United States would probably scrap the Florida, Utah and Wyoming, the newest of which, the Wyoming, was completed in 1912. The other two were completed the year before. Great Britain probably would scrap four vessels of the Iron Duke class and some one other, the four of the Iron Duke class already due for scrapping, and Japan, her oldest capital ship, the Kongō, of 27,000 tons.

Now were the fifteen ships to be left in each of the battleship fleets of the two English-speaking powers of equal aggregate size and power, that would mean parity between the United States and Great Britain in capital ships, but it has recently become known that, using the same system of measurement, the British battleship fleet as it exists today has 75,000 instead of 25,000 greater tonnage, as has until very recently been figured.
In addition to this, the British fleet boasts the two mighty superdreadnaughts, Rodney and Nelson, the most powerful warships afoot, built under the replacement clause of the Washington agreement, new modern fighting ships, either of which could outfight any ship of ours, all other things even, and one vessel laid down at the time of the Washington conference.

Our latest capital ship is the West Virginia, which was completed in 1924. We would have had three of the most powerful vessels afoot under ordinary circumstances, but in a spirit of altruism and a burning desire to show the way to the preservation of world peace and the lightening of the world's armament burden, we deliberately agreed at the Washington conference to sink and did sink one of the three which was almost completed and converted the other two into the Washington agreement, new modern fighting ships, either of which could outfight
any ship of ours, all other things even, and
one vessel laid down at the time of the Washington conference.

The British are experimenting with lights under the wings of planes with which to make landings in night flying. They may work, but planes will have to supply an awful lot of juice to operate lights strong enough for that.

TEN CHIEF JUSTICES.

In the 141 years since the organization of the federal government there have been only ten chief justices of the United States. Mr. Hughes will make the eleventh. Short terms in this great office have been balanced by long terms. The average term to date has been 14.1 years. But John Marshall and Roger B. Taney—the latter succeeding the former—served for a total of 45 years.

Well, that is comforting, and yet, after all, everything is not as it should be. Debility is a condition which, if left to grow, may end in some really serious disturbance.

Young and old may be afflicted with this debilitated state of health. It may follow some illness or injury. One may have debility from long continued worry, or grief, or fear, or from any disturbing, physical or mental.

The chief justiceship took on stability and continuity after John Marshall appeared on the scene to create his present tradition, just as he shaped the court's present powerful role in the affairs of government. John Jay, the first chief justice, was an eminent Revolutionary patriot and statesman, a member of the Continental congress, first chief justice of the state of New York. He had helped to negotiate the treaty of peace with Great Britain and had served as secretary of foreign affairs under the federation. But the court was feeling its way at that time. It had little to do while Chief Justice Jay ran for governor of New York and was counted out by the Clintonians.
He went abroad in 1791 to negotiate the commercial treaty with Great Britain which bears his name. Resigning in 1795, he returned to find himself elected governor of New York. Later he declined a second appointment to the chief justiceship made this time by President John Adams.

Rutledge's incumbency was only a passing inci-pency. He was in office less than a year. He had previously been an associate justice of the supreme court—from 1789 to 1791—resigning to become chief justice of the supreme court of South Carolina. Oliver Ellsworth, who succeeded him, was a senator from Connecticut, and had been one of the leading figures in the constitutional convention. He also went abroad on a diplomatic mission and resigned while absent in Europe. President Adams left the office vacant until 1801.

Thereafter, until Mr. Taft's day, no chief justice resigned. Marshall moved from the secretaryship of state into the chief justiceship; Taney moved into it—thought not immediately—from the secretaryship of the treasury. He had been holding that office ad interim, though attorney general, for the purpose of carrying through Jackson's fight against the Bank of the United States.
On June 23, 1851, he was nominated as secretary of the treasury, and his nomination was rejected by a hostile senate on June 24. He then resigned from Jackson's cabinet. In January, 1852, he was named an associate justice of the supreme court.

The nomination was hung up in the senate by enemies. Marshall died on July 6, 1855, and Jackson, on December 28, named Taney for the vacancy. Despite the opposition of Clay and Webster, the nomination was finally confirmed on March 13, 1856. No other chief justice has faced such political difficulties in the senate as those which Taney experienced. Chief Justice Fuller's appointment was held up from April 30, 1888, to July 20, 1889. But the delay was due chiefly to the fact that Mr. Fuller had but few contacts with politic life, and never been a judge and was not widely known as an outstanding lawyer. Salmon P. Chase was Lincoln's famous secretary of the treasury. He resigned from the office on June 30, 1864. The president recognized his great services to the country by appointing him, on December 6, 1864, to succeed Taney.

Morrison R. Waite, appointed by President Grant in 1873, was an Ohio lawyer who had won a national reputation in connection with the presentation of this country's case before the Alabama claims commission at Geneva. He was like his successor, Mr. Fuller, a lawyer, with little political experience.

Chief Justice White's nomination, made by President Taft, was a promotion within the court.
Mr. White, then a senator, having been made an associate justice in 1894 by President Cleveland.
Mr. Taft himself had served as a federal circuit judge, as secretary of war and as president—an extraordinary background for a chief justice.

Of these ten appointees eight may be described as coming directly out of the circle of public life and leadership and only two directly from within the narrower circle of purely professional situation.

Mr. Coolidge will answer for readers of this paper, questions on medicinal, hygienic and sanita-

A very practical objection to the proposal that Mr. Coolidge be a candidate was the Republicans' necessity for putting up a man who certainly could not be elected. His concealed purpose in remaining in the Senate was to be a natural inference.

Mr. Coolidge's decision not to be a candidate for

He was on record to the effect that John Quincy Adams entering congress after having been president was a step downward.

The Future of Films.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

Three great industries which have had phenomenal development in the United States in recent years are automobile manufacture, radio and the films. Henry Ford is generally regarded today, not as a great scientist, although he is assuredly an inventor of no mean ability, but as a benefactor of mankind for placing the means of quick and ready transportation in the hands of every one. Marconi, the inventor of wireless telegraphy, recently declared that the immense and rapid development of the radio was largely due to the "push" put into it by American enthusiasm, energy and inventive genius.
America today, and virtually from the outset, has enjoyed practically the world monopoly of the film industry; and this monopoly bids fair to be maintained for some time to come.

Much interest is now being displayed in the films, looking to their future development.
To some, the films appear as a pictorial substitute for thought, inducing aimless reverie rather than consecutive thinking.

They have been described as "divine narcotic," a sort of "solace and balsam to humanity."

From the scientific standpoint, the silent films have already been perfected to a high<br

New Series of Comedy Programs Set for Presentation on WEAF Network

Colored Characters Featured in Entertainment Planned for Friday Night

FOR those who enjoy an old-time musical show and a good comedy to relieve the monotony of an all-classical program, the WEAF network will begin a series of shows at 10 o'clock Friday night. Part of the program will be given over to the rehearsal of "Clemencie" under the leadership of Damon Simon Pure, who turns a peddler into an opera house for his colored community.

The cultural transformation of the American people has reached a surprising Massai town and has invaded the inner sanctum of the Alpha and Omega Social club for colored folk. The colored-themed infant show is designed for a while and the popular Jim Band is converted into an orchestra with the identical personnel and instruments but with a heavy veneer of dignity.

The peddler finds Lazarus Wump, a tragic figure with aspirations sufficiently enormous to lead his artistic shoulders, assigned the role of Don Egypt. Kotelly, the singing siren, is cast in the title role. The love scenes lack nothing in romp until Hephatha Wump, Lazarus' 250-
